Elliptic-Hyperbolic Partial Differential Equations Thomas H. Otway,2015-07-08 This text is a concise introduction to the partial differential equations which change from elliptic to hyperbolic type across a smooth hypersurface of their domain These are becoming increasingly important in diverse sub fields of both applied mathematics and engineering for example

The heating of fusion plasmas by electromagnetic waves The behaviour of light near a caustic Extremal surfaces in the space of special relativity The formation of rapids transonic and multiphase fluid flow The dynamics of certain models for elastic structures The shape of industrial surfaces such as windshields and airfoils Pathologies of traffic flow Harmonic fields in extended projective space They also arise in models for the early universe for cosmic acceleration and for possible violation of causality in the interiors of certain compact stars Within the past 25 years they have become central to the isometric embedding of Riemannian manifolds and the prescription of Gauss curvature for surfaces topics in pure mathematics which themselves have important applications Elliptic Hyperbolic Partial Differential Equations is derived from a mini course given at the ICMS Workshop on Differential Geometry and Continuum Mechanics held in Edinburgh Scotland in June 2013 The focus on geometry in that meeting is reflected in these notes along with the focus on quasilinear equations In the spirit of the ICMS workshop this course is addressed both to applied mathematicians and to mathematically oriented engineers The emphasis is on very recent applications and methods the majority of which have not previously appeared in book form

Sudden arrhythmic death: from basic science to clinical practice Gareth D. Matthews, 2014-10-02 With upwards of 4 5 million deaths worldwide each year and more than one tenth of these occurring in those with no previously documented heart disease sudden arrhythmic death SAD is both a major public health burden and a highly emotive issue for society at large Recent years have witnessed a marked expansion in our knowledge of the physiology underlying SAD both in the context of hereditary and acquired cardiac disorders Thanks largely to work in genetically modified animals the growth in our understanding of mechanisms underlying arrhythmia in the hereditary channelopathies has been particularly marked Our growing knowledge of the fundamental mechanisms underlying SAD has so far failed to spur substantial developments in clinical practice Despite a large body of work in both humans and animals it remains impossible to confidently identify those at high risk of SAD making pre-emptive therapy a challenge What is more with the thankful exception of the implantable cardioverter defibrillators and pharmacological agents in very specific situations there has been depressingly little progress in finding new and effective therapies This Research Topic aims to go some way towards bridging the gap between advances in basic science and the development and delivery of new therapies It brings together original research contributions and review articles from key opinion leaders in the field focusing on the direct clinical implications of the basic science research now and in the future
