Using a range of methods and techniques, particularly data from settlement patterns, Blair Gibson demonstrates how Ireland evolved from constellations of chieftdoms into a political entity bearing the characteristics of a rudimentary state. This book argues that early medieval Ireland's highly complex political systems should be viewed as amalgams of chieftdoms with democratic procedures for choosing leaders rather than kingdoms. Gibson explores how these chieftdom confederacies eventually transformed into recognizable states over a period of 1,400 years. Historical Ecology draws from archaeology, archival research, ethnography, the humanities and the biophysical sciences to merge the history of the Earth's biophysical system with the history of humanity. Considering landscape as the spatial manifestation of the relations between humans and their environments through time, the authors in this volume examine the multi-directional power dynamics that have shaped settlement agrarian monumental and ritual landscapes through the long term field projects they have pursued around the globe Examining both biocultural stability and change through the longue dur e in different regions these essays highlight intersectionality and counterpoised power flows to demonstrate that alongside and in spite of hierarchical ideologies the daily life of power is heterarchical Knowledge of transtemporal human environmental relationships is necessary for strategizing socioecological resilience Historical Ecology shows how the past can be useful to the future
