The Eye and Vision: Anatomy

1. Anatomically, the eye is a spherical organ that is approximately 2.5 cm in diameter. It is composed of several layers, including the cornea, sclera, iris, ciliary muscles, lens, vitreous body, and retina. The retina is the light-sensitive layer at the back of the eye that converts light into electrical signals that are sent to the brain via the optic nerve.

Cornea: transparent, curved front part of the eye

Sclera: white, outer layer of the eye

Iris: colored part of the eye

Ciliary muscles: muscles that control the shape of the lens

2. The ciliary muscles are responsible for changing the shape of the lens to focus light on the retina. When the ciliary muscles contract, the lens becomes more rounded, which increases its refractive power and allows it to focus on near objects. When the ciliary muscles relax, the lens becomes flatter, which decreases its refractive power and allows it to focus on distant objects.

Vitreous body: clear, gel-like substance that fills the eye

3. The lens is a biconvex structure that is responsible for focusing light on the retina. It is made of a transparent, crystalline material that is held in place by the ciliary muscles. The lens is able to change its shape to focus light on the retina, a process known as accommodation.

4. The retina is the light-sensitive layer at the back of the eye. It is composed of several layers, including the photoreceptors (rods and cones), the bipolar cells, and the ganglion cells. The photoreceptors are responsible for converting light into electrical signals that are sent to the brain via the optic nerve.

Photoreceptors: specialized cells that convert light into electrical signals

5. The optic nerve is a bundle of nerve fibers that carries visual information from the retina to the brain. It is composed of the axons of the ganglion cells, which are the output cells of the retina.

Optic nerve: carries visual information from the retina to the brain

Optic chiasm: where the optic nerves meet

Optic tract: carries visual information from the optic chiasm to the brain

Optic tectum: part of the brain that receives visual information
