Teaching Academic Writing in European Higher Education

Lennart Björk, Gerd Bräuer, L. Rienecker, Peter Stray Jørgensen, 2005-12-30 DAVID R. RUSSELL English Department of Iowa State University U S A I was fortunate to attend as a visitor from the U S the first European Association for the Teaching of Academic Writing EATAW conference in 2001 at Groningen I was struck by the similarities in the challenges higher education faces on both sides of the Atlantic in terms of developing students' academic writing and students learning through writing It is indeed an international problem But I was equally struck by the profound differences in responding to these challenges among institutions disciplines and even within disciplines The essays in this extraordinary volume address a growing demand for help with academic writing on the part of students and academic staff alike And they do so in ways that bring fresh approaches not only to Europeans who have only recently begun to study academic writing but also to researchers and academic staff in the U S where we have a century old tradition of attention to the problem but are much in need of these fresh approaches Academic writing has become a problem in higher education all around the world because higher education sits smack between two contradictory pressures On one end far more students and far more diverse students come streaming into higher education bringing in a far greater diversity of linguistic resources often interpreted as standards are falling as Frank Haacke Tente point out
